Flower Parade.
Perhaps the most lighted for evening, our carnival was the flower parade and it was certainly the most beautiful, the most artistic. Never before had Montgomery County witnessed such a display of beauty, such an arrangement of the mind's creation as was witnessed on Friday last. Such an array of beautiful and lovely women, with a conception of nature's beauties with which their faces were adorned and decorated, would have warmed a frigid heart.

First in the order of the procession came the Queens' Chariot a beautiful creation in white and lavender drawn by a spirited team of blacks. The beautiful effect of the chariot was greatly enhanced by the beauty of the Queen and her maids of honor seated upon her throne, wearing the crown her friends so justly caused to be hers was the Queen, Miss Virgie Lowry, resplendent, entrancing, in her beautiful gown of white, while near sat her page, Master Houston Johnson. At the foot of the throne the maids of honor, Misses Stella Duffy and Miss Mamie Moriarty rested. A scene so inspiring, so beautiful one seldom sees. Long live the Queen and her court.

Next in the order of procession came Mrs A E Kemper in a rig which nature seemed to have smiled upon, so nicely were the shades of pink interwoven with the white. Mrs Newt Mallerson rode with Mrs Kemper. The contrast in their complexions only served to display more fully the beauty of her decorations. The outriders were Messrs Rock Hensley and George Clark in black dress, making a rig of which we are justly proud. Mrs Kemper took first premium for best decorated rig, single vehicle, single horse.

Next came Mrs R S Paul and daughter, Little Miss Pauline, in a beautiful effect of white and lavender, handsomely and elaborately trimmed, there being over 4,000 flowers used. Stretching above this was an open canopy upon which rested the white winged dove of peace. This, to the minds of many, was the most imposing feature of the parade. Mother and baby robed in spotless white, in their purity and innocence, surrounded by banks of elegant white and lavender flowers and over them the white-winged dove of peace bespeaking their potent influence in this world, which should not contain anything that a woman would not sanction.

Now came the idea of the day, the Misses Clark, in pink and white, making up the premium rig. Handsomely, cleverly decorated in its mass of floral beauty, it was made the more beautiful by the beautiful sisters, robed in faultless taste, who sat within. Drawn by an elegant team of white horses, the vehicle was a product of artistic temperament. The outriders Messrs Buel Hensley and Monte Muns, our handsome boys, in white trousers, pink satin coats and hats to match acquitted themselves well. In short this rig was the epitome of good and of genius.

Mrs. W. W. Worley and Mrs. J. A. Vogt came next in one of the noblest prettiest rigs we have ever seen. This rig winning the premium on one seat two horses. Profusely decorated in perfect flowers of black and white, the effect was beautiful. Mrs. Worley and Mrs. Vogt handsomely robed in black with the outriders Messrs Sisk and Palmer also in black. The horses drawing the carriage as well as those of the outriders decorated with white flowers.

Beautiful is not strong enough to give our readers the proper conception of this rig—it was truly lovely. We now beheld Mrs. Uptegrove in her handsome creation of black and yellow with black horses and yellow decorations. Mrs. Uptegrove's rig was the height of elegance. Her taste for the beautiful was everywhere predominant. With Mrs. Uptegrove were the Misses Hamilton, Gilchrist and Cullen handsomely robed in elegant black costumes forming a quartet of lovely, noble women. The ladies carried handsome black parasols with yellow flowers scattered here and there over them. Messrs Wasington and Whitesides were the outriders and acquitted themselves well.

Mrs. Uptegrove won the premium offered on single horse double rig. Our ladies deserve much credit for the elegant rigs they trimmed up and we hope next year they will all decorate their rigs instead of only a few.

Crab Apple School Notes.
Only two days of school last week but they were very good ones. Three days were spent at the street fair.

Now that the street fair is over let us work with renewed energy. We won a seven dollar ($7.) library as the best offering country school in the parade and a five dollar library for second premium for the largest country school in parade.

We have forty six volumes in our school library now. Forty two of which we have placed there this year and last.

Every book in the library is useful to our school and we should see to it that they are cared for.

Parents we invite you to read them, be prompt in returning them and teach your children likewise.

We desire to thank the district for the aid in securing these books. We thank each and every patron that in any way helped us.

Parent, had you thought about it, that the pupils had had all the vacation to visit in? It is a bad thing on next days lessons to have much visiting on school nights. When one pupil goes home with another to stay all night they generally do more playing than studying.

Pupils just make the work better now than ever. Work of nights. Put system into your work. Have a time for every thing and every thing at the right time.
